roy, of the dismounted cavalry, and of the Young Guard at daybreak to-morrow. At two in the morning he will set fire to the Kremlin. When the Kremlin is well alight in several places the. Duke of Treviso will move by the Mojaisk road. At four o'clock the artillery officer detailed for this service will blow up the Kremlin. On his way he will set fire to all abandoned wagons, will have as many bodies as possible buried, and will smash all the muskets he may find.

gist, Krasnoie:

The Duke of Elchingen will command the rearguard.

83d, BorovHk:

The natives are amazed at the weather of the last three weeks. We are having the sunshine and lovely days of the trip to Fontainebleau. The army is in a very rich country that is comparable with the finest of France and Germany.

£6th. (To Berthier.) Write to the Duke of Abrantes to inform him that the Russian army had marched on Malo-Yomslavetz; that its advance, guard reached it on one bank at the s&me moment as ourn did on the other; that the city lay on the enemy's side and on a considerable height, HO that an engagement followed which lasted the whole of the £4?th; that while our advance guard was engaged the whole Russian army came up; that on our side the Prince of Eckmllhl'M troops reinforced those of the Viceroy; that we remained in possession of the battlefield* Write further that on the 25th the army was deployed; the Russian army faced us about one league behind Malo-Yaroidavetz, but the necessity of moving the wounded who are with the army made the Emperor decide to march towards Mojaiak.
